

Gravity Switched On

Head in the clouds, never wanting to come down

Crashing back to earth, windburn making everything hurt

But not more than the impact, not more than no longer being intact

Pieces of me scattered about reality moves in, fantasy moves out

Such a mere reminder of life a slow burning desire not to fight

My mind in fragments.
My light is absent.